My Grandfather Would Have Shot Me by Jennifer Teege

Jennifer Teege, a Nigerian-German woman, discovered accidentally as an adult that she is the granddaughter of Amon Goeth, infamous commandant of the Plaszow concentration camp in Poland. Goeth and the camp where he so brutally tortured and murdered Jews were featured in Steven Spielberg's film, Schindler's List. Currently living Germany, she was given up for adoption by her German mother.

Teege's belated discovery throws her into emotional tumult and leads her to reexamine her relationships and family ties. What can she, "with dark skin and friends all over the world, have to do with such a grandfather?"
